ABUNDANCE OF WATER FOR SUMMER

State Gets Good Drenching and Lands in Fine Shape For New Crops

Glendale's seasonal rain record was increased by .05 of an inch during the past twenty-four hours, making the seasonal record to date 4.39 inches. H. E. Bartlett, 333 West Broadway, who furnished these figures to The Glendale Evening News, states that the seasonal record one year ago was 2.48 inches.

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 23.—With the storm clearing today and all danger of floods past, N. R. Taylor, head of the federal weather bureau of Sacramento, declared today that reports from every section of Northern California forecast abundance of water during the summer and the heaviest crops in ten years.

Pasture lands are in excellent condition, Taylor said, and grain crops will probably be the best in the history of the Sacramento valley.

The rainfall here for the storm was .52 of an inch. At Kanby, Shasta county, the precipitation for the past 24 hours totaled 1.80 inches.

At Red Bluff, the Sacramento river had risen 9.9 feet during the past 24 hours, standing at 19 feet with indications that it would reach 22 feet by night.

Big Storm in North SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 23.—Clearing weather was in prospect for central California today, after one of the severest rainstorms in years. Rain and high winds were reported through the northern part of the state, according to weather bureau reports.

The wind reached hurricane velocity at Point Reyes, thirty miles north of the Golden Gate, seventy-two miles per hour being reported by the weather bureau stationed there.

Through the Golden Gate the wind rushed in at from forty to forty-five miles an hour. This, combined with the heavy down-pour of rain, whipped up a storm in San Francisco bay, tearing yachts and small boats from their moorings, dashing many of them ashore, and threatening ferry traffic.

Three Craft Wrecked Three pleasure craft were wrecked in San Francisco bay and eighteen yachtsmen battled for their lives as they struggled through the storm. Two men fishing from a canoe had narrow escapes when they were forced to traffic.

Raps Jazz

JOHN BROWN, evangelist, who directed his Saturday night sermon against present day music.

The devil is centralizing on the American home, which is faced with decay, declared Evangelist John E. Brown of Arkansas, in a sweeping denunciation of jazz Saturday night before an audience of over 4000 people at the tabernacle on North Kenwood street.

"There are three kinds of music—the stately, intellectual schief; the popular kind our mothers loved, that appeals to the heart; and thirdly, wild, maudlin stuff that makes its appeal direct to the feet."

"Jazz is not music at all," he shouted, at the peak of his address. "It is just plain debauchery, the old-time tom-tom, head-bumping rhythm that appeals to the passions of savages."

Warnings have been sounded by the dancing masters of Chicago that jazz music and jazz dancing are ruining the younger generation.

And Robbed of Prints LOS ANGELES, Feb. 23.—A gang of "science bandits," seeking secret formulas of important new inventions and chemical discoveries, kidnaped Dr. Paul Hildebrandt, Chicago chemical research expert, brought him to Los Angeles and robbed him of valuable blue prints and other priceless papers, according to a theory formed today by Southern California police officers who have started a search for the criminals.

The story of the amazing crime was related yesterday at New Orleans by Dr. Hildebrandt, according to word received here from the southern city. MUSCLE SHOAL BILL GIVEN SETBACK

Senate Votes To Send Measure Back For Conference Action

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—The Underwood Muscle Shoals bill was dealt a stinging blow in the Senate late today.

Upholding the ruling of the chair that the conferees injected new legislation in the original bill, the Senate voted to send the measure back to conference where considerable delay is expected before it can be brought out again for final action. The vote was 45 to 41.

By the Senate's action, the conferees must strike out all new legislation that was not in the bill when passed by the Senate. The objection to the conference report was raised by Senator Norris, Republican of Nebraska, on a point of order.

He charged conferees with exceeding their authority and was upheld by Senator Cummins, Republican of Iowa, presiding officer. Norris led the original fight against the bill. The Senate's action was in confirming Cummins' ruling.

URGE EVANS TO BE CONGRESS CANDIDATE

Republicans Throughout the Ninth District Offer Local Man Support

Charles A. Rudel, 315 West Vine, Glendale, an official in the Pacific-Southwest Trust & Savings bank of Los Angeles, with branches in this city, has sent the following letter to A. T. Cowan, publisher of The Glendale Evening News, relative to the proposal by this newspaper that W. E. Evans of Glendale be the Republican candidate for Congress in the ninth district:

"Editor The Evening News:—I read with great interest Mr. Cowan's proposal of W. E. Evans as candidate for Congress to succeed Mr. Lineberger, and take this means of endorsing every word said in that behalf.

"I desire to take this opportunity of pledging W. E. Evans my support and offering my services in any capacity that he may require to bring about the final result.

"Having been educated in the old school of Republican politics, still adhere to the idea that our representative in Congress should be a man of wide experience of governmental affairs, with a good judicial mind, honest in his dealings with his fellow man, conversant with the conditions of his district, and a true representative of all the people of his district.

"In my eighteen years as a resident of Glendale, I have known Mr. Evans as a neighbor, friend, public official and, last but not least, as an advocate of the principles of that Grand Old Party with which we have both been affiliated so many years.

"Wishing him success, I am, 'Sincerely yours, 'CHAS. A. RUDEL.'"

Scores of people throughout the ninth congressional district, who know the part W. E. Evans has taken in the Republican party councils and who know that he is a friend of President Coolidge and therefore, in a position to immediately accomplish great good for the district and state, while one unknown to the president and the leaders at the national capital would waste valuable time in becoming acquainted and in receiving recognition, are urging the Glendale man to become the Republican party candidate for Congress.

The publisher of The Glendale Evening News is receiving many telephone calls and expressions from citizens similar to that from Mr. Rudel.

Mr. Evans, when questioned by The Glendale Evening News, said that he, too, had received numerous friendly expressions, not only from Glendale people, but from Republicans throughout the ninth congressional district.

"I certainly appreciate the many expressions coming from the people of my home city and from the district," said Mr. Evans.

Editorial in News The editorial in The Glendale Evening News proposing W. E. Evans for the Republican candidate for Congress appeared on Thursday, February 19, and is herewith republished in full:

Evans of this city, a staunch supporter and friend of President Coolidge, and leader in the councils of the Republican party, be the Republican candidate for Congress in the ninth district, which includes Glendale, to succeed Representative W. F. Lineberger, who has announced he is a candidate for United States senator, is meeting with a hearty reception from all loyal Republicans. Also, the proposal is being endorsed by members of other political parties and women who know Mr. Evans' worth and who believe that Glendale should have the honor of placing one of its own citizens, a pioneer resident, in the House of Representatives.

Friends of Mr. Evans, following the proposal in The Glendale Evening News that he be the Republican party's candidate for Congress, have decided to call a meeting to be held in the city hall on Friday, February 27, at 7:30 o'clock, for the purpose of organizing an "Evans For Congress Club." Famous 5-5-3 Ratio For War Planes Acceptable Orientals Say

TOKIO, Feb. 23.—Willingness of Japan to accept the famous 5-5-3 ratio for war aircraft was expressed here today by Captain Hisao Hozoi of the Imperial general staff. Japan is willing that construction of war aircraft be limited to the same ratio that has been applied to naval building, Captain Hozoi declared.

In fact, such a limitation would be most favorable to Japan. Japan has only 500 effective aircraft, against 2000 for the United States and twice that number for France," he declared.

PRESIDENT FOR REDUCTION OF ARMS

Coolidge Addresses Women Delegates On National Defense For Peace

LONDON, Feb. 23.—The proposed disarmament has been only informally discussed, Austen Chamberlain, British secretary for foreign affairs, told the House of Commons today. He refused to say whether it was England's wish that the conference include land and aerial armaments as well as auxiliary naval craft.

Premier Baldwin said Japanese officials had no fear of Singapore as a British naval base, as Japan and Great Britain were bound together in the interests of peace by the Washington treaty.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—It is the duty of America to set an example for the world in reducing armament, and to invite other nations to follow that example, President Coolidge declared here this afternoon in addressing a large delegation of women attending the women's conference on national defense as peace insurance.

The president's observations on armament and peace were considered particularly significant at this time in view of the "feelies" now out in the capitals of Europe aimed at a second international conference in reducing armament.

But while the president declared it the duty of this country to lead the world toward more moderate armament, he also declared that this movement cannot be permitted to reach a point where aggression is invited upon a defenseless America and security imperilled. Abolition of the army and navy he dismissed as unworthy of serious thought.

Need Protection "Even the most law-abiding of communities do not dismiss their police forces," he said. "No more can a great nation take the risk of leaving itself to be menaced by disorder."

The president paid warm tribute to the women who composed his audience. They were advocates of a strong and militant national defense, as opposed to the other convention of women here a few weeks ago who favored less armament and supported the League of Nations and world court. Most of today's audience were delegates from women's patriotic organizations.

The womanhood of Sparta has become legendary, the president said, but "our own history is proof that the women of Sparta were made of no stouter or more loyal stuff."

"We shall hardly disagree," he continued, "that peace is preferable to war."

Should Set Example

"Universal peace is an ideal to which we are all devoted. It is true we have not stopped wars. But it is also true that there is today a more definite and widely entertained conception than ever before of the possibility to prevent war under an effective rule of law. This is the great advance. But we are compelled to recognize that national safety requires such a measure of preparedness as shall be the guaranty against aggression, without committing the nation to military numbers and wealth, so fortunate in its location as our own, can and should set an example of moderation in armament, and should invite others to pursue a similar program. I do not think that we would set a good example by abolishing our army and navy.

"But we can afford to limit our military and naval establishments

CAPITAL HONORS WASHINGTON DAY

Government Bureaus Close,
As City Celebrates
Birthday Date

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—Quietly and with dignity as befitting the character of the man, the national capital today celebrated the 133rd birthday anniversary of George Washington.

All the departments and bureaus of the government were closed and only in Congress were there signs of the usual activity. In the Senate there was the time honored formality of reading Washington's farewell address, an honor eagerly sought by senators, and falling this year to Senator Ashurst, Democrat of Arizona.

The principal commemorative event of the day was staged in the new auditorium under the national committee that is planning a world-wide observance of the 200th anniversary of Washington's birth in 1932.

Churches Celebrate

John Barton Payne, ex-secretary of the interior, and George W. Wickersham, attorney-general under Taft, delivered the principal addresses at this meeting. Wickersham recalled that Washington in his farewell address spoke of two great matters that are as current today as they were at the time the address was delivered—he warned against involvement in European affairs, and he warned against making too hasty changes in the constitution by amendments.

Washington's birthday was celebrated throughout the capital Sunday in the churches.

President Coolidge sent a wreath to be laid on the tomb at Mount Vernon.

New Method Is Found To Collect Water Tax

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 23.—A unique method for collecting outstanding water and electric light bills has been devised by the board of trustees of public affairs here. Instead of resorting to the old plan of sending out monthly statements, or turning off water or current, the board permitted uninterrupted service. But when the delinquent consumers went to the county treasurer's office recently to pay their taxes they were informed that they would not be given receipts unless they paid their taxes and water and light bills in full to the county treasurer. The board had made the bills a lien against the property of the consumers. Some of the bills covered a period of eight or ten months. Without success, taxpayers protested and offered all manner of excuses to D. R. Hinkle, county treasurer.

RAIL SALES SHOW STATE PROGRESS

Southern Pacific Disposes
Of $20,000,000 Worth
For Spur Tracks

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 23.—Although transportation fairly covers the business of a railroad, the Southern Pacific Co. in 1924 realized $20,356,866, from the sale of rails, and other materials.

Much of this material was sold to various industrial concerns for spur track purposes and indicates the great expansion which is under way all over California, it was said by F. W. Taylor, purchasing agent for the railroad.

Large quantities of worn out metal are turned over to the open hearth steel mills that recently have become prominent in the development of the coast. This "scrap" material is mixed with a percentage of new materials, smelted and rolled into bars again to become an article of commerce.

Glendale police are looking for Otto L. Sanford, whom they believe, drove the car confiscated Saturday afternoon at San Fernando and Los Feliz roads, with a load of $500 worth of whisky, gin and alcohol. Sanford made his getaway when he became suspicious that the police were on his trail, according to Detective Sergeant F. C. Williams.

In the car were found a gallon of alcohol, a gallon of gin, two kegs of whisky. It is reported by police. It was necessary to pry off the door of the car, which was a closed model. In order to remove the liquor, Sergeant Williams reports, as the owner had locked it.

Lieutenant Louis Nunn was compelled to fire at the tires of a car driven by G. R. Oakley of 621 Palm drive, early Sunday morning, before Oakley would stop, he reports. In the car with him was N. H. McMahon of 3448 East Twenty-fifth street, Los Angeles. Oakley was released in $300 bail, to stand trial before Judge Frank H. Lowe of the Glendale police court, on a reckless driving charge, and McMahon was released without bail, to appear as a material witness.

The Glendale Auto camp at 146 South San Fernando road was threatened with destruction by fire Saturday night, when at 7:20 o'clock a blaze originating in the kitchen of camp house No. 7, in the first section of bungalows, quickly razed this unit to the ground. Apparatus from Station 1 of the Glendale fire department, in charge of Captain J. D. Meyer, answered the call and prevented the flames from spreading to other units of the camp. The fire was pronounced out at 8 o'clock.

H. W. Detweiler, manager of the Glendale Auto camp, was unable to state the exact amount of the damage, which was estimated by Captain Meyer as approximately $200. In addition, J. Pepper, occupant of the destroyed unit, lost $100 in personal effects, he reported.

'WOODSHED' SPIRIT NEED OF PARENTS

So Says State University
Professor In Comment
On Modern Child

BERKELEY, Feb. 23.—More of the "woodshed" spirit among parents is needed to curb the modern child, according to Professor C. D. Mead of the department of education of the State University. "Parents of today are shifting their responsibilities on to the already overburdened shoulders of the teachers," said Mead. "They expect too much from the schools. They now demand that teachers give esthetic and moral as well as mental training."

"And yet, despite this general lack of home training," continued the educator, "it is claimed that present day children cannot read, write or spell as well as their predecessors."

"When it comes to accomplishments, present day pupils are far ahead of either their parents or grandparents at the same age. Tests given in Boston in 1850 were used recently and in practically all cases the modern child outclassed the students of former generations."

Passes Away

JOSEPH M. OLMSTED, member of The Glendale Evening News Sunset Club, who died at the age of 88 years.

Joseph M. Olmsted, 88 years old, member of The Glendale Evening News' Sunset club, died at 8 o'clock Saturday night, February 21, 1925, at the home of his son, Henry J. Olmsted, 364 West California avenue. He had been ill several weeks.

Possessed of a youthful voice, bright eye and quick step, Mr. Olmsted, although past four-score years in age, maintained active interest in affairs of the day up until the time of his recent illness. He enjoyed reading and writing, several of his sketches appearing in The Glendale Evening News. When he was received as a member of the Sunset club he paid a visit to The News' office, bringing a sketch of his life written by himself in a style clearly legible. In that sketch he said in part:

"I was born in Windsor, Conn., May 2, 1836, in the age of the stage and tallow candle. Windsor was the first place to be settled by the English, and was the native town of many noted men. Grants, Morgans, Ellsworths, and many others, were born there."

Mr. Olmsted is survived by two sons, Henry J. Olmsted, with whom he resided in Glendale, and Dr. George K. Olmsted of Denver, Colo. He also leaves four grandchildren, one grandson being Henry Ennis Olmsted of Glendale.

He deceased had lived in California twenty-four years, eight of which he had spent in Glendale. Funeral services will be held at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, at the Jewel City Undertaking parlors, 137 North Orange street. Rev. Julius Soper and Rev. J. C. Livingston will officiate. Mr. Olmsted's body will be taken to Arlington Heights, Ill., for interment.

TWO PATRIOTIC PROGRAMS GIVEN

Students At Broadway and
Harvard High Schools
Honor Washington

Patriotic programs in observance of Washington's birthday were put on this morning at the Broadway and Harvard high school auditorium, under the supervision of Miss Maude Soper, head of the history department, assisted by Miss Jessie Hill, chairman of the committee in charge. The program at each school opened with "Salute to the Flag," followed by a tableau, "Birth of Old Glory." Then came two numbers by the Girls' Glee club, "Minuet" and "California Song." The next number was a tableau, "California," after which the Boys' Glee club gave "Tenting Tonight." This was followed by a Civil War tableau, staged by W. G. Collins, commander of the local G. A. R. post, assisted by T. M. Barrett, patriotic instructor, and Rev. C. R. Norton, chaplain.

The concluding number on the program at each school was a tableau depicting the participation of the United States in world affairs, from the time of George Washington to Woodrow Wilson. Washington's birthday was observed in the ten elementary and two intermediate schools by appropriate readings in the English and history classes, it was learned.

CLAIMS ANIMALS IN ACTS BEATEN

Humane Society Appeals To Theatregoers To Aid

Members of the Santa Barbara Humane district have issued an appeal for animals who appear in motion pictures, vaudeville acts, circus numbers and carnivals, claiming the animals are mistreated in training in order to provide entertainment for the theatregoers. In their appeal, they quote the following, written by Victoria Grey in a Chicago paper:

"The tortures that the actors in the animal world are put through are cruel and hideously heartless. The trainer figures that those who die in training on account of cruelties are not worth keeping anyway."

ASKS REMOVAL OF TREES ON AVENUE

Earl E. Hitchcock Writes
Letter To News About
Future of Street

Editor The Evening News—Following is an open letter concerning the trees on Glendale avenue:

In the question whether or not trees should be allowed to remain on Glendale avenue, all residents of Glendale and all its business men and women should, with a sense of justice and a wish for wisdom, be interested.

Permit me to point out why I, a property owner, and tax assessor, assessment payer on Glendale avenue, earnestly hope that they will be removed, and removed at this time. In so doing I know I do not speak for myself alone; nor do I confess myself to be behind others in the logic of beauty or of trees. Moreover, I maintain that I have a sense of civic pride large enough to embrace the welfare of our entire city.

The cutting of the trees is not a question to be discussed from a safe distance, out of sight of the cost of the sentiment; it is one to be discussed in part at least by those who confront the problem at their door and store steps, and who, one way or another, will have to pay the bills.

No doubt everyone will admit that residence streets should be restricted to residence uses, that business streets should be kept free from the retardation of residential interests, and that a mixed policy does no one good. The question is Glendale avenue a business street or not?

One way of answering the question is to ask some of the long-time residents of the street. It has been declared that some of these consider the street still residential. But, perhaps, a fairer test of opinions of such residents would be to take into account the prices at which they hold their property. Are these residence prices or are they business prices?

A more obvious method, however, of determining whether or not Glendale avenue is a business street is to note that it has been zoned for business now for some time; and that on the belief that it is commercial in its intrinsic nature and its prospects, a carline was laid on the street, the street was paved, lights were installed, and the property owners were duly assessed. Furthermore, they were taxed on the basis of business valuations.

Many Newcomers
Many of these property owners are newcomers. They have paid handsome prices for their holdings, on the assumption that they were buying business property and that the street would go rapidly ahead. They have secured vested interests by purchase and by the erection of business buildings. In many blocks the property is priced at $200 and more a front foot. These are not residential prices.

The next question is, is Glendale avenue not to be treated, then, as a business street? Is it not to have the same advantages as Central avenue, or is it to be held back? Progressive business will induce the settlement of business men and capital upon a street; for a policy that will go out and get them and not merely wait for them to come.

That policy demands the removal of obstacles—even trees. It demands that our new lights be unobscured, that the street be broad by day as well as at night; that trees, for the most part, be taken away from in front of stores and buildings, where they tear up the sidewalk and obstruct the view.

But, even if all the trees were beautiful, which they are not, still their retention would be too expensive a luxury—on a business street. And who would pay? The property owners would, in increased values foregone and in business disappointments. This would be an indirect payment, but it would be as expensive as the direct. Would anyone help them shoulder the burden?

But there is not much business there now, it is said. Then let us go out and meet it. It is to the interest of all Glendale to develop this artery to the foothill towns. But—there is business on the street, and more is coming very rapidly. There are seven business places in one block between Cypress and Palmer, and there is a larger proportion in other blocks. On several corners there are handsome business buildings erected within the last year. Twelve hundred and fifty machines in an hour pass by, by a count made around 4:30 on a Tuesday afternoon. No.

Whether or not, also, the city has too many streets zoned for business beside the mark. Certainly in lessening the number it is not going to begin with a thoroughfare such as this.

Would Retard City
But what not now? To neglect to do so will do injury to all property owners on Glendale avenue, because of the pursuance of a non-progressive policy. To that extent it will retard the growth of Glendale itself.

Let residential points of view be kept on residential streets; let a strict and forward-looking business policy be pursued on business streets, of which Glendale avenue is one, and not the least.

EARL E. HITCHCOCK,
1229 South Glendale avenue.

SAVE THE TREES

The plea of Mrs. Hartley Shaw which appeared in The Glendale News a few days ago for the preservation of the trees on Glendale avenue struck a responsive note in the hearts of all tree-lovers. It had been announced that a committee was appointed to "feel out" the residents of Glendale avenue to learn if they will consent to the destruction of the trees in order to lend greater efficiency to the new lighting system. Mrs. Shaw says she is old-fashioned enough to love trees. If the love and appreciation of beauty is old-fashioned, then we believe that most people are in that class.

It is to be hoped that the association which has done so much for Glendale, and especially for Glendale avenue, will reconsider its plan to destroy the trees that make the street so attractive. The association is to be congratulated on the installation of a beautiful system of lighting, but no lamp has yet been designed that is quite so charming standing out stark and alone in the parkway as it is with its light shining through the fern-like leaves of the pepper tree, or softened by the shade of any tree.

Glendale has all too few streets that are tree-shaded. In this respect alone some of our neighboring cities excel us. Utility is fine and necessary in community building, but beauty can be made an aid to utility. These two forces are not opposed, as some seem to think. Drive about Glendale, or any city, with the thought of what trees can do to aid charm. Imagine the tree-lined streets with their cooling shade and shelter, the thirsty earth and the pavement reflecting the heat of the hot summer sun which is drinking up all the moisture from the ground. Try to see in your mind's eye the trees that are now bare of trees as they would look if they were shaded. You will realize that no architecture, no lighting system, no man-made beauty can take the place of shade trees.

It may be, it must be, that there are some who do not love trees, else there would not be such ruthless destruction of them everywhere. A tree is not to be compared with a human life, and yet there are some to whom the sight of an axe imbedded in the trunk of a tree causes a feeling of nausea similar to that they would feel on seeing a human being maimed or hurt.

We are all pleased that the women of California have collected a fund of three-quarters of a million dollars with which to buy two miles of redwoods in Humboldt county in order to preserve these grand old trees, and we are proud that a Glendale woman, Mrs. R. W. Meeker, was so largely instrumental in helping to build up this fund. But, while we are helping to save the trees a thousand miles away, let us not sacrifice our own, even though our street trees are in no way comparable with the venerable and wonderful redwoods.

The large cities of Europe and of many of our large eastern cities, including our capital, have streets that are known the world over and these famous streets and avenues, even though they be business streets, are lined with fine shade trees. It is not progress but retrogression that sacrifices trees.

Some may object to the particular kinds of trees that are growing on their streets. Everyone has his favorite and it is hardly possible that all the residents of any one street would agree on one variety of tree. Do not sacrifice a tree just because it is not your favorite. Many other people who will think it beautiful and will be refreshed by its cooling shade must pass your way.

We wish to make Glendale attractive to strangers. There is nothing like trees, and especially those that are peculiar to this section, to delight those who come from other parts of the country.

Glendale avenue is one of our main boulevards, it is traversed by many strangers. The people of the eastern section of Glendale have always shown a remarkable spirit of faith and progress. The good things they have done cannot be enumerated here. The new lights on Glendale avenue are attractive, they mark a long stride forward for the east side of Glendale. But to destroy the trees on this boulevard would be a backward step.

'CONSUMPTIONISM' A MENACE

The farmer with his motor-driven vehicles of all kinds and his labor-saving machinery, the business man with his elaborate equipment for promoting efficiency in business, the housewife in her electrified home, all look back fifty years and wonder how the people of that day did the day's work with the crude implements of the time. The woman of fifty years ago, for instance, had none of the conveniences the woman of today enjoys, and yet she reared a large family, doing all the work herself. Her daughter and her granddaughter often ask, "How did she do it?"

The answer is "consumptionism," a word that has just been coined by Samuel Strauss, who, in an article in the Atlantic Monthly, points out the evil of this force which is dominating our business, our press, our politics and our religion. He defines the word as the science of compelling people to use more and more things, and he says it makes the citizen's first importance to the country that of consumer rather than of citizen. A few of the outstanding manifestations of this evil are automobiles, radios, buildings, bathrooms, furs, furniture, linens, hotels, bridges, vacuum cleaners, cameras, bus lines, electric toasters, moving pictures, railway cars, package foods, telephones, pianos, novels, comic supplements, and so forth.

We should not want to do away with any of the things he has mentioned nor with many others we enjoy which our parents and grandparents did not have. But we should not entirely discount the warning of this writer that we are being dominated by, rather than being masters of, "things." We are moving away from simplicity to the multiplication of desires—to luxury, and it is entirely proper to stop and ask ourselves whether it is going to lead us.

Living in our grandparents' day was reduced to its simplest terms and we cannot say that we are happier than they were. The world must progress and we would be a sorry people if we refused to accept any new ideas or new inventions. But we can enjoy these comforts and devices if we do not let them master us. We cannot live today like our grandparents lived, but we can live simply as Sir Joshua Reynolds defines simplicity, "the exact medium between too little and too much." We can be masters of "things" and not slaves to them.

When they refer to a woman as having a checkered career, it may only mean she's a cross-word puzzle fan.

SAMUEL IN THE LION'S DEN

Money Ruined Him

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Everybody is seeking for money, but it is the seeking which counts, as money is not always a blessing when it comes.

The man who won $20,000 for suggesting the name "Liberty" to a popular magazine is now charged by his wife with the abandonment of her and his four children.

The first thing he did with his prize money, his wife said, was to buy a six-cylinder touring car and a quart of liquor. She also said that he kept paying $5, $10 and $15 tips to taxicab chauffeurs and bootleggers.

"Before he won that prize we were in pretty poor circumstances," said his wife. "We were in debt, but at least we were happy. 'We were in debt, but at least we were happy.'"

The question in life is not only who is going to receive the prizes, but what people are going to do with them.

Winning a beauty prize may mean moral and spiritual ruin to the successful contestant. Beauty is of no advantage unless used beautifully.

Many a man has found it harder work to take care of his money when he got it than to get it in the first place. If he makes a large amount of money he finds all society arrayed against him. Beggars assail him, tradesmen overcharge him, and the government taxes him. He finds that the possession of money renders him a marked man.

A man with a large fortune is in one respect like Cain, for every man's hand is against him. So there are two sides to success.

It is a question whether success is more valuable as a goal to be attained than it is as a goal which has been attained. Those on the way up to it get plenty of advice and sympathy from others. Those who have arrived do not receive much sympathy.

It takes considerable training to be able to take care of money. And often people who are suddenly raised to affluence do not know what to do with their possessions.

Certainly if receiving a large sum of money induces a man to take up extravagant and bad habits and to desert his wife and children it is a bad thing for him.

The same thing is true with the possession of any talent. A man may be a great violinist, a great pianist, or a great speaker, and his success may ruin him as a man. It is very difficult for anyone who is extraordinarily endowed in any way, either in money or talent, to keep his faculties in balance.

The best condition for a man is one of struggle and uncertainty. While he is struggling he is automatically kept normal and in check. That the majority of the human race are not on Easy Street is a good thing for the race.

If every man were a millionaire the world would speedily go to the devil. It is the fact that most people need to worry and struggle along with obstacles that keeps the world sound and sane.

The Best of Advice

By CLARK KINNARD

When we think of Lincoln and Washington let us consider them not as supermen, but as humans. For, after all, they were men, with weaknesses of men; but with more strength than most of us.

The school books (and most of their biographers) paint us portraits of a Washington and a Lincoln that never existed. The Lincoln we know is more real than the popular conception of Washington, but even the Lincoln of our time is different in many vital respects, from the Lincoln who lived.

A recent motion picture "Life" of Lincoln has, perhaps, helped dissipate some of the misconceptions surrounding Lincoln. It shows him first as a raw, gangling country youth, no more heroic in aspect than millions of other farm lads living then, and now. Later he is seen entertaining his cabinet with funny stories from one of Artemus Ward's books, when vital questions were waiting to be settled.

Washington is known, drank, played cards and loved dancing; was, in fact, a gentleman. He would have laughed at the idea of a whole people believing that he never told a lie.

These men were great, but they were also human; and it adds, rather than detracts from their fame if we consider them as men like us who did great things, rather than supermen who had powers far beyond those of the ordinary man.

This tendency to think of great men as supermen is as old as man. It admits of his ignorance of his own powers.

At this time, when Washington is often quoted in arguments against foreign alliances, it should also be remembered that he said: "Supineness and a disposition to flatter ourselves seem to make parts of our national character."

"I cannot recommend measures for the fulfillment of our duties to the rest of the world, without pressing the necessity of placing ourselves in a condition of complete defense, and of exacting from them the fulfillment of their duties toward us."

"A free people ought not only to be armed, but disciplined. To this end a uniform and well digested plan is requisite."

"Without presumptuously waiting for miracles to be wrought in our favor, it is our indispensable duty, with the deepest gratitude to Heaven for the past, and humble confidence in its smiles on our future operations, to make use of all means in our power for our defense and security."

"There is nothing so likely to produce peace, as to be well prepared to meet the enemy."

Who's Who

The assistant chief of America's army air service faces possible court-martial, however remote, because of his criticism of his superiors regarding activities in connection with the development of that branch of the service. Both he and Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of navy aeronautics, are under criticism because of their testimony before the House committee.

General Mitchell is one of the outstanding figures in the air service. He has 30,000 hours in the air to his credit. He has traveled about 350,000 miles in airplanes of various types.

On one of his inspections at McCook field, Dayton, O., he went into the air with every plane at that field, and some of the old buzzes would hardly hold together.

Following the Pulitzer cup races at Detroit in 1922 he hopped into a Curtiss racer, and stepped on the gas for 224 miles an hour, establishing a world's record, one, however, which has since been topped several times by his own subordinates.

General Mitchell was born in France, but came to America at a very early age, his parents locating in Wisconsin. Along in 1898 he had the urge to join the army and did so as a buck private. Then came the Spanish-American war. He emerged as a second lieutenant.

When the world war came along he was sent overseas in 1916 as an observer. For two years he remained there as an observer. Then America plunged in and Mitchell, being on the ground, got the chance of his life. He was placed in direct charge of the American aerial activity along the western front. It is said he commanded the largest force of flyers ever assembled.

Until Major General Patrick began flying, General Mitchell was the only flying general in the world.

REALTORS GO OVER BILLS ON REALTY

State Body Reviews New Legislation Making Recommendations

The legislative committee of the California Real Estate association held an all-day session at the state association offices in Los Angeles, on February 17, with Chairman Freeman H. Bloodgood presiding, and among those present was President D. Richard Ainsley, of Fresno.

The establishment of the proposed research and statistical work on real estate resources in charge of a specially qualified deputy at a salary of not less than $3600 per year, and for printing and distributing results of his work to be set up under the state department of real estate and maintained out of the license fees, was unanimously approved as a major point of constructive legislation. This is provided for in A. B. 1115 by Eksward of Burlingame.

The committee approved two amendments by Senator Breed to the present act as asked for by the department, namely, to make it a misdemeanor instead of a felony to sell realty without a license, and, secondly, to place persons who negotiate the sale, purchase or "exchange" of leases under the jurisdiction of the commissioner.

Endorsed amendment by Eksward to the code of civil procedure Section 1559 providing for equal division of commissions between broker representing original bidder and broker representing successful bidder.

Salary Increase
Endorsed a substantial increase in the salary of the real estate commissioner.

Endorsed bill by Johnson and Swing to provide for creating metropolitan water districts out of cities not contiguous in territory.

Endorsed an enabling act A. B. 953 by Little of Hermosa Beach permitting counties to obtain park and beach lands.

Endorsed an act by Senator Sample of San Diego permitting withdrawal of property from registration under Torrens system, in case owners desire such restoration.

The committee also recommended:
Further investigation of the Neighbour-Mixer bill appropriating $500,000 for a continuation of water resources survey in California.

Further investigation of an act repealing the present "set back" line law, as proposed in A. B. 1140 by Brock of Redlands.

Subdivision Bills
Four bills affecting subdivisions as follows: A. B. 549-A, B. 156 both by McDowell of Fresno; A. B. 580 by Melville of Fort Bragg; A. B. 924 by Walter of Los Angeles, were under consideration, and the committee felt advisable that the attention of the state real estate commissioner be directed toward these measures to the end that such regulation and control as his department might desire over subdivisions, be brought out under city and county control.

After considerable discussion no action was taken on the proposed mortgage loan bureau act, A. B. 233, introduced by Spalding of Santa Clara county.

The committee was informed by Chairman Bloodgood that he had made a complete survey of the 2000 bills introduced in the Assembly and Senate and found affecting real estate by direct or indirect measures on taxation were referred to the taxation committee.

In reviewing pending real estate legislation in 38 states the committee found that many of the states were still working for the model license law which California adopted six years ago. In Oregon, an effort was being made to have the state Legislature appropriate general funds for state advertising under auspices of the State Chamber of Commerce.

Real Estate Paper
Realtors of California under their proposed real estate resources survey would avail the state of this important work to be paid out of their license fees, this being no general taxation. The bill, as it is currently prepared, the committee stated, would be issued under the seal of the state and prove of vast value to the whole commonwealth, the committee held.

The committee recommended that the skeleton bill providing for the publication of a "state paper on real estate annually," as introduced by Assemblymen Brock, Davis, Noyes, Dayton, Morrison and Burns (A. B. No. 899) be consolidated with the proposed research and statistical bill A. B. 1115 introduced by Assemblyman Frank Eksward, floor leader for the legislative committee.

Two bills affecting real estate have been proposed by Assemblyman Frederick M. Roberts of Los Angeles as follows: A. B. No. 906, being a skeleton bill on the real estate act and A. B. No. 748, being a skeleton bill to regulate and prohibit the evasion thereof, and to provide penalties, etc.

Partnership

JAMES M. RHOADES, top, and B. W. SLOAN have formed the firm of Rhoades & Sloan, for transacting business in real estate, insurance and loans, at 106 East Wilson avenue.

James M. Rhoades and B. W. Sloan, two well-known business men in Glendale, announce the formation of a partnership under the firm name of Rhoades & Sloan, to transact business in real estate, insurance and loans. The firm office is at 106 East Wilson avenue.

Mr. Rhoades served as secretary of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce for several years, later forming the firm of Rhoades & Smith with Fred Smith. A year ago Mr. Rhoades bought the interests of Mr. Smith in the firm and for the past year conducted the business alone.

Mr. Sloan was formerly distributor for the Overland and Willys-Knight cars in Glendale, the firm of B. W. Sloan, Inc. being located at 905 South Brand boulevard. On September 15, 1924, Mr. Sloan disposed of the auto agency to H. H. Murray, of Springfield, Mass. Mr. Sloan spent eleven years at Brookline, Mass., where he sold automobiles, and five years prior to opening the auto agency in Glendale on June 1, 1923, with George T. Smith, he was engaged in the insurance business. On May 1, 1924, Mr. Sloan became sole owner of the agency.

Hapsburgs Seek to Get Confiscated Property

VIENNA, Feb. 23.—The Gazette de Prague reports that the Hapsburgs have made representation to the Austrian government for the restoration of confiscated properties. It has been proposed to the Christian Socialist party that a committee be formed to go into the matter, and that this committee shall consist of three members—a lawyer, an historian and a former court functionary. The duty of this body will be to examine the claims and to establish what property of the Hapsburgs would be entitled to be termed private property and what was actually state property.

Senator Asks Government Handle Loans

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—Asserting that foreign governments had tapped the American investment market during 1924 for $1,600,000,000, much of which was spent in war, not peace activities, Senator Shipstead, farmer-laborite, of Minnesota, in a speech in the Senate this afternoon urged the federal government to assume control and direction of this foreign financing. He referred directly to the overtures France is now making for additional loans of $135,000,000 in Wall Street, and congratulated President Coolidge and the administration for "frowning upon it."

ADVENTISTS HEAR PARMELE ON BIBLE

Adventist Elder Discusses Papacy and Why Sunday Was Festival

At Bible study last night in the Seventh-day Adventist church, corner Isabel street and California avenue, Elder Parmele gave an exposition of the prophecy of the seventh chapter of Daniel. He said:

"The four unusual beasts that Daniel saw, as recorded in this chapter, are representatives of the same kingdoms referred to in the second chapter, namely: Babylon, Medo-Persia, Grecia and Rome. This is expressly declared of the fourth, for, in verse 23 of the seventh chapter, that the fourth beast is the fourth kingdom, while in Daniel 2 it is stated in verse 40 that the fourth kingdom should be as strong as iron, which undoubtedly refers to the metal used in this prophecy to represent that power. The ten horns on the fourth beast of Daniel 7 are declared to represent ten kingdoms into which was divided, but Daniel was especially interested in a little horn that came up after them.

"Much argument may be presented to designate the power represented by that little horn symbol, but time will permit of only a few references, as we wish to especially notice what that power would do. In a lecture delivered in the School of Theology at Geneva, October 5, 1843, Gauss, D. D., professor of theology, gave fourteen 'marks' of identification of this power, which prove it to be the one predicted in this prophecy.

"But this power is to 'think himself able,' as the revised version puts it, to change 'times and the law.' This clearly refers to God's law, and especially to that part of God's law that relates to time. The question at once arises, then, has the papacy thought to change God's law, and the fourth commandment of that law, which relates to time? It should be remembered that the papacy existed as a system before the pope was given his temporal power, which was in 538 A. D.

Festival of Sunday
"Neander, in his 'History of the Christian Religion,' page 186: 'Opposition to festival of Sunday the particular festival of Sunday very early, indeed, into the place of the Sabbath. The festival of Sunday, like all other festivals, was always only a human ordinance, and it was far from the intentions of the apostles to establish a divine command in this respect; far from them, and from the early apostolic church, to transfer the laws of the Sabbath to Sunday. Perhaps at the end of the second century a false application of this kind had begun to take place; for men appear by time to have considered laboring on Sunday as a sin.

"Thus we are brought to the end of the second century, when perhaps men began to have considered laboring on Sunday a sin." Passing on, we read in Chamber's Encyclopedia, Article Sabbath: 'Unquestionably the first law, either ecclesiastical or civil, by which the Sabbath observance of that day (Sunday) is known to have been ordained, is the edict of Constantine, 321 A. D.' That law was given by a sun-worshipping emperor, who made no other profession at the time, and it read as follows: 'On the venerable day of the sun let the magistrates and the people residing in the cities rest, and let all workshops be closed.'

Catholic Councils
"Smith's Bible Dictionary, Article Sabbath, says: 'After Constantine things became different at a later period, for the reason that the current of opinion, he declared himself a convert to the church. And the edict of A. D. 321, being unrevoked, was enforced as a Christian ordinance.' (Quoted from Sunday and the Mosaic Sabbath, page 4, R. Groombridge & Sons, London.)

"Then, in 364, the Catholic councils began issuing edicts concerning it, the first in Laodicea, then in 528, the year of the papal establishment in temporal power, a council held at Orleans, and many others. Even as late as 1435 a provincial council said, concerning conditions in Norway: 'We counsel all the friends of God throughout all Norway, who want to be obedient toward the holy church, to let this evil of Saturday-keeping alone, and the rest we forbid, under penalty of excommunication, to keep Saturday holy.'

"Thus was the Sabbath of the Lord well-nigh crushed out of thought as well as of its rightful place in the practices of men. 'But the judgment shall sit,' says prophecy, 'and they shall take away his dominion.'

Manufacturer Declares Use of Raw Coal Crime

CHICAGO, Feb. 23.—Burning raw coal will eventually be a national crime, declared B. G. Dahlberg, Chicago manufacturer, in an address before a conservation congress here. National fuel conservation, a companion endeavor to forest conservation, may be met by proper carbonization, which makes a ton of coal yield, on an average, three gallons of gasoline, eighteen gallons of crude oil, two gallons of lubricating oil, thirty pounds of sulphate of ammonia, with a residue of 1400 pounds of smokeless fuel.

Two thousand more vessels entered Rotterdam last year than in 1923.

tion. When dancing masters condemn anything, it must be bad. Tell me what kind of music your children are allowed to have, and what kind of dances they are allowed to attend, and I will tell you where you are sending them. "I tell you, your homes are deciding the destinies of your children. Home is the most powerful influence in Christian life. The school of the state stands the school; back of the church stands the home. The home is God's best and oldest gift to the state. There are no sweeter words than 'mother,' 'home' and 'heaven.' The nation rises no higher than the level of the home. "I am an optimist, and yet I say to you that there is a storm cloud threatening the American home. The fireside is the center of the fight. If the devil can win the home, he can win the church, the school and the state. He must be fought and defeated in the home. As long as the American home is dedicated to Jesus Christ, we need have no fear.

"Let us look at your home, even if you are not there, and can tell what sort of people you are. What is in your home? Will it bear inspection? I tell you, American home life is slipping. It is being undermined by jazz!"

Sunday night Evangelist Brown preached another strong sermon at the tabernacle, choosing for his subject "The Devil's Deceits," which he declared are gambling, immorality and intemperance. "I can no more connect up a pure, sweet Christian woman with a deck of cards or an upright, sincere Christian man with a drink of liquor than I can connect up heaven and hell," he declared. "Most of the criminals of today got their start in homes that went wrong, in social gambling, social dancing and social drinking.

"Statistics show that no great sin ever came from a card-playing mother. If a boy had never learned to play cards at home, do you suppose he would be so likely to step into a gambling dive in some dark downtown street? And 99 per cent of the drunkards and women who have gone wrong got their starts at home."

Sunday afternoon Rev. L. A. Ferris addressed several hundred men and young men at the chamber, on "Going Back to Bethel," while Mrs. Loren G. Jones talked to the women and girls at the First Presbyterian church.

Starting Tuesday morning, February 24, Evangelist John E. Brown begins a series of talks on "The Spirit-Filled Life," at the tabernacle on North Kenwood street. These morning meetings are from 10 to 11 o'clock.

British Columbia Sets Mine Record In 1924

VANCOUVER, B. C., Feb. 23.—Mining of British Columbia broke all records for production in 1924, according to a report issued by the Hon. William Sloan, minister of mines. The mineral output for the year, Mr. Sloan said, will total more than $45,000,000 in value, an increase of nearly 10 per cent over the 1923 figure, or $3,811,965. Increases in the production of metalliferous mines in the province was one of the features of mining activity during the year. Production from the metal mines was valued at $23,310,600, compared with $26,767,062 the previous year.

STATE REALTY BODY HEEDS PARK PLEA

Association Endorses Act Proposed to Insure Public Lands

Heeding the appeal of thousands of clubwomen throughout the state of California, the legislative committee of the California Real Estate association at the request of Dr. Jesse A. Russell, Glendale realtor, has gone on record favoring an enabling act presented as Assembly Bill No. 953 by Walter Little, Los Angeles solon, which provides a method for counties condemning, purchasing and acquiring public park lands and beach lands.

According to Dr. Russell the clubwomen are particularly interested in reserving ocean frontage for beach playgrounds. Much of the most desirable beach land in Los Angeles county and other metropolitan areas, it is said, has been bought up by real estate subdividers and sold to clubs and individuals.

The real estate committee met in Los Angeles Tuesday and the meeting was presided over by Freeman H. Bloodgood of Santa Ana, chairman. D. Richard Ainsley, president of the state association, was among those present.

Research Urged
All legislation in which realtors are interested was considered and some of it referred to the committee on taxation. The one outstanding measure of the California Real Estate association's program this year is to obtain a deputy in the state real estate department who will do research and statistical work with a view of publishing and disseminating authentic information regarding real estate, according to Dr. Russell and others who were present.

STATE LIVESTOCK VALUE IN MILLIONS

Foot and Mouth Disease Cause Big Decrease Last Year

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 23.—Total value of all livestock in California on January 1, 1925 was $148,575,000, compared with $165,502,000 on January 1, 1924. It is stated in a bulletin published today by E. E. Kaufman, federal agricultural statistician. The decrease of 3.8 per cent in the year is attributed to the loss of 109,679 head of cattle, sheep and hogs by the foot and mouth epidemic and to the severe drought which prevailed in many sections in 1924, forcing many stockmen to dispose of their animals.

Cattle other than milk cows decreased 148,000 head, or ten per cent while there was no decrease in milk cows. Sheep increased 51,000 head while hogs were diminished by 125,000 head during the year.

"Livestock on farms in California on Jan. 1, 1925 is estimated as follows: Horses, 317,000; Mules, 62,000; Milk cows, 664,000; Other cattle, 1,330,000; Sheep, 621,000; Swine, 709,000. Horses average $76 per head, mules, $91; milk cows, $73; other cattle, $30.30; sheep, $8.70; swine, $10.25.

Segregated values of different livestock are as follows: Horses, $24,092,000; mules, $5,642,000; milk cows, $48,472,000; other cattle, $40,299,000; sheep, $22,803,000; swine, $7,267,000.

Oldest Plant Said to Be 12,000 Years Old

BELLEFONT, Md., Feb. 23.—Many motorists have turned from the main road at New Bloomfield, Perry county, in the last few days, toward Covallen, there to view the box huckleberry bush, held to be the oldest plant in the world.

The giant growth achieved national distinction when Dr. Edgar T. Wherry, of the federal department of agriculture, told members of the American association for the Advancement of Science at Washington, D. C., that he believed it was the oldest bush in the world. The box huckleberry is a mile and a quarter long, covering the entire side of a hill. Dr. Wherry of the opinion it grew six inches a year. Therefore it may now be 12,000 years old.

Four hundred miles of highway were constructed in Alberta, Canada, last year.

Glendale not only should get right with God but with John Brown. We've never heard him, we repeat, but we'll wager dollars to doughnuts we wouldn't regret an aisle seat up in a row at the tabernacle during one of his "hit-the-trail" talks if his words impress as does his fighting face.

LIGHT CONSUMERS MANY IN COUNTRY

California Leads All Other States In Use of Electricity

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 23.—Statistics show that in California there are 167,504 rural light and power consumers outside the incorporated limits of cities, who are served by 16,513 miles of power lines, or an average of 10.1 consumers to each mile of line. With an increase of 23,016 consumers during 1923, California leads all other states in the use of electricity. It is estimated that on farms alone there are 35,500 electric motors in use in California, with an aggregate of 483,965 horse power. Eighty per cent of these motors are used for driving irrigation pumps. Another big factor in consumption is the 10,000 farmers' wives who cook by electricity, more particularly in the interior valleys where wood, coal or oil is not readily available.

Native laborers of Java receive an average of $35 a year in wages.

COMMUNITY LOYALTY—COMMUNITY SERVICE—COMMUNITY LOYALTY—COMMUNITY SERVICE—COMMUNITY LOYALTY—COMMUNITY SERVICE—COMMUNITY LOYALTY—COMMUNITY SERVICE

Merchants have contributed many thousands of dollars to Glendale's development.

A wise business man knows that helping to keep the city alive and growing spells success for him.

COMMUNITY CO-OPERATION

Realizing the Great Community Development Truth that a City Grows exactly as its Business and Merchandising Institutions Grow, these firms have given their hearty endorsement to the movement for co-operation between Glendale merchants and Glendale consumers

Merchant a Public Benefactor

People of Glendale, have you ever stopped to think of the men and women who have been in business here for one, two, three, four, ten or twelve years and what they have meant to Glendale during the time the city has been growing out of the small town class? Have you ever stopped to estimate the convenience they have afforded the people of the city and the thousands of dollars they have paid in taxes and public improvements and how greatly this sum has contributed to Glendale's present prosperity?

Business concerns are not charitable institutions in any sense of the word. A merchant is in business to make a living, to add to his wealth or because he likes the game—or for all three reasons. Any man who would claim to be wholly disinterested in the business in which he is engaged would be ridiculed. And yet the merchant who is wholly selfish cannot succeed either. A store or any place of business is an integral part of the community and the merchant must, first of all, concern himself with the things that will keep the community alive and active and his own business success will follow.

Whether his motives be selfish or unselfish, the man who is successful in business is a benefactor to the community and as such deserves support and patronage.

"The making of a good town requires the utmost in co-operation on the part of all concerned," says the Santa Barbara Morning Press. "It requires public-spirited merchants and business men and a public that will show its appreciation of this public spirit by generous patronage. The prosperity of a city depends as much upon this condition as any other to be found in the life of a community."

Bad Boys Are Hurling Oranges At G. Offill

Boys, please don't throw oranges at Glenn M. Offill! It is quite rude. Young Offill, who lives at 526 Western avenue, is a newsboy. He reports to police headquarters that he has been annoyed by boys throwing oranges at him from the grove at Western and Orange Grove avenues, as he rides by to deliver papers in the afternoon. Unless this is stopped, declares Chief John D. Fraser of the Glendale police department, Glenn is going to have the support of the strong-arm squad in making his deliveries.

FROM EAGLE ROCK

EAGLE ROCK, Feb. 23.—Tonight at Harmony hall, 2122 Colorado boulevard, the Greater Eagle Rock association, will be organized, for the purpose of staging an advertising campaign in this community to tell easterners some of the advantages of living here. This announcement is made by C. W. Young, president of the Chamber of Commerce. The meeting is open to the public and Mr. Young urges all property owners and interested residents of Eagle Rock to be present.

The annual dinner dance of the Women's Twentieth Century club will be held Saturday night, February 28, at the clubhouse. A southern style dinner, cooked under the direction of the president, Mrs. A. G. Reilly, will be served and there will be a dance later, with a special surprise program promised. Hostesses will be Mrs. A. G. Reilly, Mrs. Grace Sherwood, Mrs. McNitt, Mrs. Cruzan, Mrs. Vardeman Baily, Mrs. Sutton, Mrs. John Krause, Mrs. William Simpson, Mrs. M. T. Lee, Mrs. Fred Hannaford.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock the study class of the Women's Twentieth Century club will visit "Java" through a talk given by Mrs. C. W. Ritchey, vice-president of the club, at her home, 5149 Maywood avenue. Mrs. Ritchey has many interesting reminiscences of her travels in that country, as well as some rare souvenirs and an interesting and instructive session is anticipated.

BURBANK NEWS

BURBANK, Feb. 23.—The local Eastern Star chapter held a dance Saturday night at the Women's clubhouse, in honor of the new officers. It was voted one of the most enjoyable affairs of its kind ever held. Music was furnished by the Lone Star four. C. H. Green had the affair in charge. He was assisted by Mrs. Walter Lawrence, Mrs. Claire Woods and W. E. Patterson.

Burbank is much interested in the recent decision of the Los Angeles City Council to pave the San Fernando road from Huron street to the city limits. The job will cost $100,000. The council has instructed the Board of Public Works to proceed in the matter. Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Wolcott of Los Angeles have returned to their home after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Johnson of Palm avenue.

Floyd Burgess and son, Eugene Burgess of Los Angeles, the latter a freshman in the University of California, Southern branch, visited recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Rough of 302 Magnolia avenue. J. D. Yoder of Harper, Kansas, who is spending the winter here with relatives, was entertained recently by his son, Alfred Yoder, with an automobile trip during which they visited Upland.

S. A. Keyes and George A. Blazier of 360 Magnolia avenue have left by automobile for a trip of several days' duration. They will visit the Imperial valley and San Diego.

LANKERSHIM

LANKERSHIM, Feb. 23.—This section of the San Fernando valley is seething with oil excitement and large interests are understood to be rushing to secure leases on both sides of the Southern Pacific tracks in the vicinity of Vineland avenue and Victory boulevard.

Agents of the big producers have been at work here for several months. Ion Clark, a well-known oil man, represents the people who are said to be anxious to erect derricks and begin to drill. Clark was the discoverer of the Rosecrans field and is known to have taken active part in oil developments in different western fields that have since become recognized producers. Clark is not telling anybody the name of the company or companies he represents, but there is every reason to believe that his activities are in the interest of one of the five recognized big institutions.

Along Lankershim boulevard it is broadly hinted that it would come as no surprise if within a week material would be delivered on the ground for the erection of the first derrick. This early action is reported as being based in near Pacoima, where a standard-height rig has been erected and is in full operation.

Geologists have long held the belief that the San Fernando valley is underlaid with oil. They insist that it is present not only in pools and reservoirs, but when it is discovered they say it will be found that there is a genuine river of the black gold, coursing in a southerly route across the valley from end to end—from the Newhall field on its way to the sensational deposits that have developed to the south and west of Los Angeles.

TUJUNGA NOTES

TUJUNGA, Feb. 23.—A resolution opposing changes in the Torrens' title act was adopted at the last meeting of the Tujunga Valley Realty board. Plans were discussed for a program to be given at the time local realtors who have taken the course of study in real estate law and practice receive their diplomas. This will be given in the near future.

L. H. Fisher, a past president of the Tujunga Chamber of Commerce, has been transferred to Chicago by the company he is connected with in Los Angeles and expects to leave soon to take a higher position there.

Dr. H. M. Lockwood of Los Angeles is completing a new home on Estaban way and expects to occupy it about March 1.

Miss McKee recently entertained Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Kennedy, Miss Helen Ferrier and Miss Annabell Ferrier. Mrs. W. R. Mehard and Mrs. Leo L. Lang of Eagle Rock also called on Miss McKee recently.

Mrs. Clarence W. Byrer of Hillhaven recently entertained at luncheon for Mrs. George Aiken, Mrs. Arthur C. Stover and Mrs. James M. Goode.

Mrs. Douglas Grant entertained at her home, 156 1/2 South Sunset boulevard, at tea Thursday afternoon.

SUNLAND NOTES

SUNLAND, Feb. 23.—Finis has been written, temporarily at least, to present incorporation plans in Sunland by the action of Judge Shaw in Superior court denying a writ of mandamus to compel the county Board of Supervisors to call an election to vote on incorporating a city of the sixth class. Proposals of incorporation have not abandoned the project, however, and hope to gain their objective in the not distant future. Plans to that end will probably be formulated and put into action soon.

A clean-up day was staged Wednesday at the Sunland Baptist church when a large number of volunteer workers did some cleaning and decorating on the grounds of the church. The work was led by members of the Tujunga Kiwanis club and a lunch was served at noon by ladies of the church.

The new garage and office building of the Verdugo Hills Transportation company is practically finished. This building, located near Rice's cafe, will be used as the home terminal of the bus line running to Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Williams recently entertained Mrs. Susie French, Miss Ramona French, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Calkins and Miss Alice Moxley of Glendale.

Police Looking For Early Morning Rider

"THE RACE OF MERCY"

Nothing has ever thrilled us more than the history of the delivery of the anti-toxin to the diphtheria sufferers of Nome, by the Alaskan dog teams. The "Race of Mercy" it has been called, and the "Epic of the North," it was both.

Day by day we pictured the dogs straining and panting, over the ice and snow, blinded by needles of ice driven by the gales, so deadly cold that to stop running on the trail meant certain death. These famous dogs and their famous drivers had been in the races before, but never had there been a race for life against death, and never did they exert themselves as they did in this race.

Day by day we watched anxiously for their arrival. Day by day with all our hearts we urged them on, with all our souls we prayed that they would arrive. We pictured the children dying of stranguation and poisoning from diphtheria. We knew that if they could only get the antitoxin in time they would be saved.

It was upon the dog, animal friend of man, that we had to depend to carry the precious life-giving serum, donated by the other animal friend of man, the horse.

If you never have been interested in anti-toxin before, you will be interested now, I know, so today I am going to tell you how it is manufactured.

Diphtheria Anti-Toxin. If you have an infectious disease and recover from it, it is because your body cells have manufactured a defense against it. This defense, in certain diseases such as typhoid and smallpox, may stay with you for life and you will be immune to these diseases, so you will not contract them again. In other diseases such as diphtheria and pneumonia, the defense is short-lived and you may contract the diseases again.

In diphtheria, instead of waiting for the body to manufacture its own defense and perhaps die in the attempt, we give a defense which has already been manufactured by healthy, young horses. The horses which are used to manufacture this defense are submitted to rigid inspection. They are placed in detention stables for several weeks and during this time they are given thorough physical examinations by veterinarians, to be sure that they are free from glanders and other diseases. Those pronounced perfectly healthy in every way are admitted to the sanitary anti-toxin stables. Here they are infected with less

My own hair tonic, which I am giving again today has been the cause of a lot of correspondence owing to one ingredient, an excellent antiseptic, which gave the tonic an odor that some readers did not like. Now, as I wrote a few weeks ago, a lot of my formulas have been simplified and combined, some have been thrown away and others substituted, and the whole set are better than before. We really are making intelligent discoveries in regard to the care of eyes, teeth, and complexion, hair and so on, because women are paying money for lotions and treatments and druggists are putting their brains to work on these problems.

The pilocarpine tonic, which is still the best one I've found, used to contain a creosol mixture, a creosote antiseptic—one of hundreds of things derived from valuable wood that I like its smell, to me it's clean and fresh and nice, but not every reader agrees. In the beginning I used detergent, also antiseptic, but an English product which for a time was so hard to get. I dropped it, substituting the creosol. Now, druggists tell me, detergent can be obtained easily, so I've put it back in all formulas sent out. Here it is: Pilocarpine Hydrochlorate, 2 gr. Precipitated Sulphur, 30 grains Detergent, 10 drops Castor Oil, 4 ounces Tr. Cantharides, 4 drams

MY OWN HAIR TONIC

Cologne 4 drams
Rose Water, to make 3 ounces
Your druggist must mix this. If you're no druggist, you can omit the sulphur; if you want it extra nice, use Farin. Cologne instead of the plain cologne. The pilocarpine adds richness to your hair's color.

Anxious.—Clip off all burned ends of your hair if they are very dry and inclined to crack; also massage the scalp every day to quicken its circulation. If you stop using the hot irons and improve the health of your scalp through massage, you may not need any other treatment to start your hair growing again.

If you do not get results after a few weeks of treatments, try a hair tonic several times a week, but keep up the daily massage also. I do not know anything about the tonic you mention, but if you wish a formula for take pilocarpine tonic, I shall be glad to send it to you.

Try this formula for poor hair.

Potato-Beef Pie: Into a greased baking dish put a layer of canned (or fresh, sliced) tomatoes, then a layer of dry bread crumbs, followed by a layer of cooked and chopped beef. Sprinkle salt and pepper between these layers as you add them, and alternate the layers until the dish is full (using in all about four cups of the chopped meat, one pint of the tomatoes and one quart of bread crumbs). Spread a layer of mashed, left-over potatoes on top and cook in a moderate oven for 35 minutes, serving hot.

Potato Scopes: Sift together one and one-half cups of bread, two teaspoons of baking powder, and a pinch of salt; add one cup of mashed potatoes and rub in your fingers. Now add one beaten egg and one tablespoon of sweet cold milk and divide this soft dough in three parts. Roll each third into a round cake about a half-inch thick, cut in four quarters and bake in a quick oven for about ten minutes, or fry on a hot griddle, turning once. Split and serve hot. (Note: If the mashed potato is not very stiff, you may have to add the tablespoon of milk. Use your own judgment. It should be a soft dough. On the other hand a little more milk may be necessary.)

Orange-Prune Salad: Remove stones from cooked prunes and cut the prunes in half. Mix with them an equal amount of diced orange, and serve with Mayonnaise. Dressing, on crisp lettuce leaves.

Baked Chocolate Custards: Put into the top of a double boiler, three cups of sweet cold milk and three squares (ounces) of unsweetened chocolate shaved finely; cook over rapidly boiling water till the chocolate is dissolved, then add one-half cup of granulated sugar mixed with the beaten yolks of four eggs. Let simmer only a moment, then pour the mixture with one-half teaspoon of vanilla and turn it into small individual baking dishes; set these dishes in a shallow pan containing hot water and slip all into a moderate oven to bake till the custard sets—about 20 minutes. Now spread the egg-whites beaten stiff with three tablespoons of sugar, over the little custards and continue baking slowly till the meringue is browned.

DARKENED WINDOWS

A clock somewhere chimed the quarter, bringing an incongruous reminder of green, quiet English closes and cathedral bells into this scene of violence. It seemed incredible to Graham that not ten minutes had passed since he entered the house. He looked at his watch to prove the clock wrong, but by that, too, it was a quarter after 9.

In the act of replacing his watch, Graham suddenly stiffened into an attitude of strained attention. There had been a sound in the house. It came again—a step on the stairs! In sudden panic, Graham looked about for some way to escape. His position was no longer simply embarrassing, it had become alarming. If discovered here would not he himself be suspected of the crime? His defense, as he thought of it, seemed too utterly weak and nonsensical. The seriousness of the situation was not to be disguised. His desire to escape increased the more he considered it. But escape was no easy matter. The only door visible was the one by which he had entered; to leave by that was to run into the arms of whoever was now ascending the stairs with slow and heavy tread. If other door there was, one leading into the room beyond, for instance, it was masked by bookshelves and probably opened with a spring. For such an exit there was no time to search. A large alcove, or what, perhaps, had been a small room thrown at sometime into the larger one, seemed the only refuge. There was a possibility of its having a door leading into the hall, if so he might still have a chance of slipping out unseen. A heavy curtain drawn halfway across the opening offered at least a momentary shield. As the heavy footsteps approached, he slid behind it.

His first panic was over and his brain was working quickly. He must ascertain first of all whether or not the supposititious door into the hall existed in fact, for if it did not the alcove would be a trap rather than a refuge. The light was dim behind the curtain, but he was able to satisfy himself that the door was there. The space in which he found himself was probably the habitat of a secretary, as a businesslike desk on which stood a typewriter occupied a prominent place near the window which was darkened, like those in the outer room, with thick curtains. It was here, doubtless, that E. H. had typed her note.

The intruder had reached the library and was entering. Behind the portiere Graham held his breath and watched. At first he could see nothing; the man was evidently pausing at the door and taking a survey of the room. Then the slow step quickened; Graham imagined the start with which the newcomer had caught sight of the figure sprawled across the writing table. Another instant and the man had come into view. Graham, to his dismay, recognized the uniform of the police force. Still breathlessly peering, he saw the officer bend over the dead man, then start erect and glance sharply around the room.

The telephone stood on a small stand against the opposite side of the room from the alcove. It occurred to Graham that if the man should call at headquarters and report the crime, as undoubtedly he ought to do, his back would be turned for a moment and there would be a chance to slip out into the hall. He saw the policeman take a step forward and then hesitate. Did he mean to telephone or would he search the room first? Graham grew cold with suspense. Another forward step took the big, blue-coated figure again out of sight. For all Graham knew he might be coming toward his retreat. Then he heard the click of the receiver as it left its hook. In an instant he was at the door. As he opened it he could hear the man at the telephone speaking.

"Hello, is that you, Inspector?" he called. "Sergeant Bassett speaking. Say, there's been bad work done here—Hannibal Hurst's been shot."

Graham stopped short as he was stealing by the library door, his eyes anxiously glued to the broad, blue back at the telephone. Hannibal Hurst! His firm's wealthy client! The man who, only an hour ago, had telephoned to his uncle's house! What had been a shocking, but a remote, impersonal thing, became, all at once, a matter of tremendous import. The murder of an unknown man he could contemplate with somewhat of detachment; the murder of Hannibal Hurst concerned him personally. He felt himself, in a sense, caught up into the heart of the tragedy. He could hear Sergeant Bassett's voice rumbling on as he slipped stealthily down the stairs, but he could distinguish no further words. He had learned the one important thing, however—that it was Hannibal Hurst who lay dead in the room above. As soon as he had extricated himself from his present perilous position he must telephone to his uncle to return immediately to town.

Sergeant Bassett had switched on the light in the lower hall and thus made Graham's descent easy. He blessed the rugs for being so thick and soft; he blessed the door for opening so noiselessly. He thought he heard a step on the stairs behind him as he was in the act of closing it, but he no longer cared. He was outside! He was safe!

He stood once more outside freshening, and he drew in deep breaths of it. His knees felt absurdly weak; he had not realized 'till he stood once more outside the door, how tense the strain of the last minutes had been. His overcoat and Philippa's bracelet were both forgotten; the memory of Hannibal Hurst's huddled figure and a pair of haunting eyes in an unknown photograph had, for the time being, driven all lesser things from his mind.

THE GATEWAY

"Sundown." First National's long-expected drama of the west, which has proved to be the most pretentious effort of that company's own producing units now playing at the Gateway theatre to-day and Tuesday.

"Sundown" is an original story written by Earl Hudson, supervisor of the First National productions. The story unfolds the dramatic theme of the passing of the old west before the advance of civilization. This is, incidentally, current history, since the encroachment on the unfenced ranges of the southwest recently caused American cattlemen to unite their herds and drive them across the Rio Grande into Mexico, and it was these scenes which were filmed by First National to be incorporated in "Sundown."

Never again will such huge herds be seen in the United States. More than 100,000 head of cattle will be seen winding their way in a huge line half a mile wide in this great production.

The human players who enact their roles against a background of awe-inspiring grandeur and immensity are: Hobart Bosworth, Bessie Love, Roy Stewart, Charlie Murray, Arthur Hoyt, Charles Selton, Charles B. Crockett, Bernard Randall, Wilfrid North, Hal Wilson and Jere Austin.

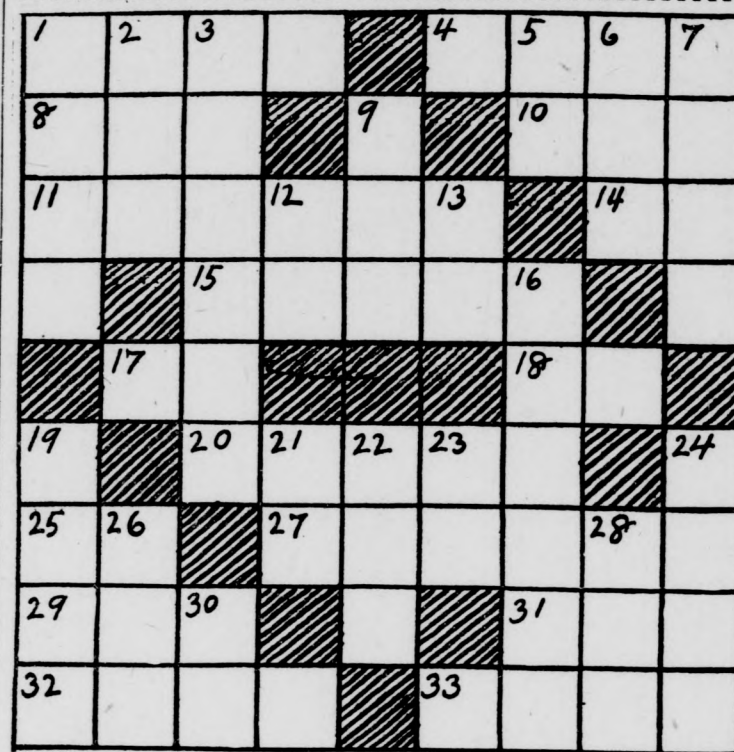

THE GLENDALE House Peters in "Tornado" continues at the Glendale Theatre.

THE T. D. & L. Lon Chaney in "He Who Gets Slapped" continues at the T. D. & L. Theatre.

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE WOODEN DOLL
Once upon a time, when Uncle Wiggily was hopping through the woods, wondering what sort of adventure he might meet, all of a sudden he saw Mrs. Twistytail, the lady pig. She was waddling along, for she was quite fat, and she was grunting and saying to herself:

"A wooden doll is what she needs! That's the only kind she can't break! I'll get her a wooden doll!"

"For whom are you going to get a wooden doll, Mrs. Twistytail?" asked the gentleman rabbit. "Excuse me for hearing, what you said, but I couldn't help it."

"That's all right," answered the lady pig. "I was speaking of Baby Bunty, that funny little rabbit girl. She is staying at my pen for a while, and such goings on you never saw!"

"What do-s she do?" asked the bunny.

"You might better ask what she doesn't do," grunted the pig lady. "But the latest thing is to break her doll. She gets so excited, playing tag and games like that with her doll, that she doesn't know what she is doing. Then Bunty drops her doll and it breaks and she feels badly. I have bought her three new dolls since she has been at my pen, and she has broken every one. Now I am going to the seven and eight cent store to get a wooden doll. Bunty can't break that!"

"I wouldn't be so sure!" chuckled the bunny. "But do me the favor to allow me to get the wooden doll for Bunty."

"I know it will give you a great deal of pleasure to do that, so you may," agreed the lady pig. "I'll go back home and tell Bunty to expect a surprise."

So she turned around to go back home and tell Bunty to expect a surprise.

WASHINGTON PAID 'FORWARD MARCH' 'FAITH IN CHRIST' 'OPTIMISM' TAKEN HONOR BY PASTOR IS PASTOR'S TEXT REV. KEMP'S TALK AS SUNDAY TALK

Rev. Calderwood Eulogizes 'Father of Country' As Great Man

"Washington's Religion" was the subject of the memorial address delivered by Rev. C. M. Calderwood, pastor of the Congregational church at the George Washington birthday vesper service held yesterday afternoon at the church, under the auspices of General Richard Gridley chapter of Glendale, Daughters of the American Revolution. He said:

"It is well for us to keep fresh in our memories such men as Washington and Lincoln. We should not think of them as demigods but through their characters we should see the ideals they represented. Thoughts of these men will serve to keep us from forgetting our purpose as a nation and as a people."

"I have not discovered that Washington's religion differs much from types of the religious life that we see about us today, but I wish to call attention to the fact that Washington's greatness was born out of his religious life. His greatness was the greatness borrowed from God. His character, his service, and his influence were all rooted in his religious life."

"So far as we can see there would have been no American republic without George Washington and there would have been no George Washington without the Christian religion."

Physically Great
"Washington was great in his physical strength, in his unflinching courage, in his military genius, in his wisdom as a statesman, in his harmonious combination in his character of various mighty forces, but he was chiefly great in the purity and grandeur of his moral and spiritual life. He was a good man, of simple, heartfelt faith in God and the redemption of Jesus Christ. There was more fidelity and sincerity in America and in England than now. Those were the days of Voltaire, Hume and Thomas Paine. Washington seems to have been entirely unaffected by these writings."

"Whosoever will be great among you let him be your minister, and whosoever will be chief among you let him be your servant. Herein lies the open secret of Washington's abiding influence in American history. His greatness was the greatness of service. It was through the surrender of personal comfort for public duty that there was given to this man his grip on the love of his people. His life without stint was laid on the altar of national duty."

Special Character
"And this is the special aspect of Washington's character to which your attention is invited. Not Washington, the leader, masterful and inspiring; not Washington the soldier, resourceful and dauntless; not Washington the statesman, keen and prophetic; but including all these aspects, Washington the servant of his people. His life was a commentary to his Master's words: 'Whosoever will be great among you let him be your minister.'"

"This text is, you may see, Jesus' definition of true greatness. In what respect then, does Washington's career interpret this Christian ideal of greatness? How did he serve the country? His services brought glory and ministry became mastery? Washington served his country by his devotion to a high ideal of public duty. Public life, for him, was not an opportunity for plunder, but a privilege for giving service. He was the exponent of the highest idealism. His purposes were lofty and his integrity unswerving."

Epoch Making Man
"Washington served, not simply by marking an epoch, but by making an epoch. He not only represented the patriotism of his time, but he was the creator of a new and better patriotism. The enthusiasm and the genius of his personality created forces which gave a new impulse and a new meaning to his age. He was not simply the follower of the best of his time, but was a Moses leading his people out into a land of promise."

"Washington could serve his country because he had a faith in the future. He had faith in God and therefore had faith in the righteousness of his cause and a confidence in its final triumph. This took a great faith and a firm confidence in God's leadership. His faith awakened in him a consciousness of his own powers. Because he accepted God's help he was master of himself."

"Washington was fitted to serve his nation because he early learned to serve his God. We have one hundred and ten rules of conduct which he as a boy copied and kept before him. These rules contained these significant words: 'Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire called conscience.'"

Rev. Thomas, Grand View Preacher, Relates Tragic Story

"Forward March" was the sermon preached yesterday by Rev. G. W. Thomas, pastor of the Grand View church. He took his text from Exodus 14:15. "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward," saying:

"Great things, and especially God's work, are seldom done easily. God's work did not go easily in Israel. It did not go easily in acts. It does not go easily today. God never said it would be in His word of old. Jesus never said it would be glorious. He said it would cost sacrifice and heartache and be much that He said that He would do His part if His people would do theirs and that He proposed, that would He carry through."

"The most dramatic story of all history is that of Israel in Exodus. The most dramatic moment of the story is that instant of decision when God told Moses to speak to the children of Israel and bid them to go forward under the outstretched rod toward the sea. It was the first call of a people to walk by faith and not by sight—and they obeyed. In that instant they had but now been a rabble of slaves with the permission of a tyrant to go three days' journey into the wilderness and to sacrifice to their gods, became a nation on the march beneath the banners of the Almighty. Jehovah never said their path would be easy. He said it would be triumphant if they continued faithful and obedient. And they went up harnessed out of the wilderness, with a high hand and an outstretched arm. Oh, but it was glorious!"

More Than Story
"This record is something more than a story of a people escaping from bondage. It carries the fiery pillar and the cooling cloud for all God's people in all times and places. It makes the truth and the power of God forever manifest, and we should never forget its incidents nor its lessons. In the first place, God was making a people, a people who could walk and work by faith. The world needed such people. It needs them now. God is always getting them ready to fulfill His purposes."

"In the second place, God was preparing those people by great, diverse, wonderful experiences which they did not understand but He did. Someone has said that God has three avenues of communication with man; through the head; through the heart; and through the hand. He used them all on Israel, even to affliction and iron. He uses all three today. The main thing is to get God's idea, but it is so much better to get it in the rich experiences of head and heart. They saved many a year of wandering in the wilderness and sweeten the bitter springs."

Real Dangers
"And finally the real dangers that threatened Israel were not material nor physical, but spiritual, and from those not even God could save them without their own co-operation. There were no other dangers. If there were no other dangers, if there were no other perils, the spiritual perils that beset and often slew them are proof enough. It is a distinction to the Jew that the Devil paid him so much attention."

"When men are beset of the devil, they are having their worth proven. So it was with Job long before Israel's time. So it was with Israel. So it is with men and nations ever. When the devil concentrates on you, take it as a compliment and go forward. In this great day of the trial of the church everywhere, it is not Moses with his rod, but Jesus with the pierced hands stretched out ahead over the red and perilous pathway, who cries: 'Now let the church go forward!'"

Rev. Kringel Preaches Sermon To Lutherans
"The Sweet Smelling Sacrifice of Christ" was the subject of the sermon delivered yesterday morning by Henry O. Kringel, pastor of the Zion Evangelical Lutheran church, corner of North Isabel and East California avenue.

Holland has withdrawn its subsidies for commercial airplane operations and some of the air lines are being restored through co-operation with established companies of other countries.

sword; he maintained that independence by peace as by war, and he finally established both his country and its freedom in an enduring frame of constitutional government.

"Some of the elements that characterized his religious life were these. His sensitive conscience was not smothered by selfishness. He loved his bible, he saw in it God's revelation to the world, and he read it carefully through his life. He observed the Sabbath and used the day to minister to his soul's needs. He added to his idealism and kept it fresh, and he kept his vision clear by regular attendance at church services. His power was not his own, but God's, received through constant prayer. 'He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister.'"

St. Mark's Pastor Preaches On Acceptance of Faith In Son of God

Rev. Philip K. Kemp, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal church, preached a sermon yesterday on "Christian Discipleship Demands a Courageous Acceptance of Christ," saying:

"Many in the days of Jesus' earthly life found difficulty in accepting Him especially when He began to preach the gospel of His divine sonship. So long as He preached an easy gospel they were willing to follow and see the wonders He did and to hear the gospel as it affected other people. The simple peasants of Galilee must have been quite pleased to have Him denounce the Pharisees from Jerusalem or the odious tax gatherers but were not so well pleased when He started on his home. St. John tells us that after Jesus began to preach about His relationship to the Father and of Himself as the bread of life many found this a hard gospel to accept and many went back and walked no longer with Him."

"The acceptance of Jesus as the Christ is much more than mere theology for it rises high above the theological speculations of the ages. Many have turned from the later speculations about Christ yet are just as firmly embedded in faith in Christ the Son of God as was Athanasius, Luther or Calvin were in their own day."

Belief In Christ
"Men do, however, turn back from Christ for a very obvious reason that they cannot conceive of a man being the Son of God. That our religion demands the extreme spirit of adventure has been true. All the controversies of today between the various parties in the church are subordinate to this one—how can a man become God. Today in one form or another men and women are denying it as they refuse to allow Jesus Christ to dictate their form of living."

"The kingdom of God has been held back for this very reason: They do not accept His teaching as to politics and world peace feeling that their own selfish way is better than His; and they refuse to allow Him to control the life of selfish competition and competition for the principle of love. We cannot accept Christ as the Son of God and not allow Him to control our lives. If we believe in God believe also in Me."

"Many have also turned back because the first bloom of enthusiasm has passed and they are unwilling to persevere, feeling it is not worth breaking with their old ways of life to follow one who they say may only be a dreamer. This is not only a description of those who turned back from Jesus as Capernaum, but fits as well many of us today. To use a slang expression, we get cold feet on the question of the Christian life."

Many Turn Back
"Many turn back because they have not the intellectual courage to accept Him. Men have always found it difficult to think of religion as a spiritual and not a material possession. Jesus was so different from what they expected His spiritual teaching. The Son of God dwelling among them in human flesh seemed an impossibility. Rigorous thinking has always been difficult. It is always easier to accept the traditional teaching. People are saying that as much today as at any period in human history."

"The creeds of the fourth or sixteenth century are easier to adopt than that suited for the needs of the complex social life of today. To walk with Jesus demands great courage both moral, spiritual and intellectual, and to accept Him means we accept Him for our whole life and not merely a small portion of it."

Rev. Funk Compares Gloomy Attitude With Bright Side of Life

Speaking on the subject "The Bright Side of Things" at the First Lutheran church yesterday, Dr. Funk, pastor, said:

"Fifteen thousand people commit suicide every year in the United States alone. A million a year use this method of ending their earthly career in the world. What is the cause of this awful record? The answer is, a disease called melancholia."

"Discouragement is one of the greatest enemies of mankind. It has stunted and starved more people than any other one thing. In fact, many capable and talented young men and women have given up in despair because some pessimist has blighted their lives by sowing the seed of discouragement."

"But, the fact is, every man who undertakes to do anything worthwhile is under fire; and the real hero is the one who keeps right on in spite of the obstacles that impede his progress."

Pessimist's View
"Yes, I know that the pessimist declares that he has learned to expect nothing. He tells us that if you expect nothing, life has taught him that you will not be disappointed. Nobody, however, how- ever, can be associated with such a gloomy outlook."

"No, hope was planted in the human breast to help us believe that the best is yet to come. It is important, however, that we work with all our might to make that hope and belief come true. Take away the disposition to hope, to expect things, and you shatter the mainspring of our existence."

"The character of Job illustrates the fact that clouds may be very black and still have a silver lining. But, alas, he declares 'Now men see that I am in the clouds' which is in the clouds. Job had great confidence in God; he also had great courage and lots of patience. Indeed, courage is the keynote to final success. The pessimist is walking in his own shadow. Instead of the glorious light of God's love. There is a divine element in each one of us. Look on the bright side of things and give it a chance to develop."

TOWER UNVEILED FOR FOREST LAWN

Memorial Park Dedication Attended By 3,000 People Sunday

Dedication of the Tower of Legends on the summit of Mount Forest Lawn, Forest Lawn Memorial park, was held yesterday afternoon with an impressive service attended by approximately 3,000 people. Symbolizing progress, genius and religion bas-reliefs on the tower, were explained by Dr. Daniel F. Fox, pastor of Pasadena Congregational church.

"The utilization of the waste of the barbarians constitutes civilization and the waste of the world is the wealth of the world. The utilization of this waste is progress," said Dr. Fox. "Genius sees beyond the merely utilitarian, and is exemplified in music, art, sculpture and literature, as well as in the more mundane examples of mechanical achievement; it is a sacred flame to be carefully guarded, flinging the glory of life upon us all."

"But the supreme note of life is yet to be struck, and so we must wend our way to the Little Church of the Flowers. Religion is more abiding than the merely social, legal and commercial relations of life. It is religion which helps us to get off the rocks when we are stranded, bringing us safely to port when the ship's keel grates on the unknown shore and the eternal hills dawn upon our vision."

'God's Acre'
"It is fitting, therefore, that we should meet today to dedicate this Tower of Legends. It is fitting that this place of beauty and tranquility should anew be set aside as 'God's Acre.' Here where flowers bloom perpetually, here where the sunlight falls through the foliage, here where man's progress and genius and religion minister to the deepest needs of the human heart, we praise and thank God. To this place of quiet beauty through the years countless thousands will journey as those, who make a pilgrimage to a holy shrine. Here they will gather comfort. Here they will earn anew that faith, hope and love endure. And because of this they will come and go, not in fear

CARSON CITY, Nev., Feb. 23.—Governor J. G. Scrusham has offered a reward of $500 for the arrest of the slayer of George Okeson of San Jose, Cal., who was lured to Nevada through a want ad in a San Francisco paper promising a position as bookkeeper with a mining company and shot on the southern Nevada desert for the $500 check he had been told to bring along as insurance against dishonesty. A man suspected as the slayer has fled, authorities said, and the reward was offered in hopes of apprehending him.

Stamp Hinges Patron Directed to Hardware
Can you imagine going to a hardware store to purchase stamp hinges? This was the advice given Russell Nixon of 629-B North Orange street Saturday when he attempted to make the purchase at two local stationery stores. Evidently the stationery store did not know that stamp hinges are used to paste stamps in a book specially made for that purpose.

but in the triumph of the spirit of invincible love."

The invocation was delivered by Dr. Birney S. Hanson, associate pastor of Temple Baptist church, Los Angeles. Harold Proctor, tenor soloist at the same church, gave a vocal solo, and Sergeant B. McClure, Seventeenth United States Cavalry, a cornet solo. The tower was unveiled by Miss Lois A. Ewing of Pasadena.

Treaty With Near East Up After Year's Sleep
WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—The Lausanne treaty, restoring diplomatic and trade relations in the near east ruptured by the war, was favorably reported by the Senate foreign relations committee today, after slumbering in a committee pigeonhole for a year.

Two reservations were attached to the treaty—one providing that the United States will not submit to arbitration an issue involving American immigration laws, and a second providing that after one year's operation the treaty may be suspended on sixty days' notice.

ASKS RETENTION OF LICENSE FEE

President of Local Laundry Company Expresses His Views In Letter

Protests against the abolishment of the $30 license fee collected monthly from laundries in Glendale is contained in the following letter sent to The Glendale Evening News by R. W. Starr, president of the Star Laundry Co., Inc., which operates the Premier laundry at Arden and Pacific avenues:

Editor The Evening News:—We understand that there is an agitation by laundry concerns from the city of Los Angeles to eliminate the city license of $30 per month charged them to enter the city of Glendale to transact business.

We consider that it would be decidedly unfair to the laundries of Glendale if the license charged were eliminated. The laundries of Glendale have a payroll of approximately $3500 per week and pay a city license of $30 per month each plus our regular tax assessment. In order to go into Eagle Rock, Hollywood or Los Angeles we have to pay $30 per month to the city of Los Angeles. Should the city eliminate the $30 license fee, Glendale would be overrun with outside laundries and this would cripple our home industries. We are appealing to you to protect our home industries.

CAR OWNERS by hundreds of thousands are equipping with Firestone Balloons—not only for comfort and safety—but to save money.

Everybody knows Firestone Balloons protect the chassis—stop vibration—and reduce repair bills. Your car remains new longer—its resale value is far greater.

Another basic feature exclusively Firestone is the Gum-Dipping process which insulates every fiber with rubber and adds great strength to each cord. The Gum-Dipping process is the very foundation of balloon tire success.

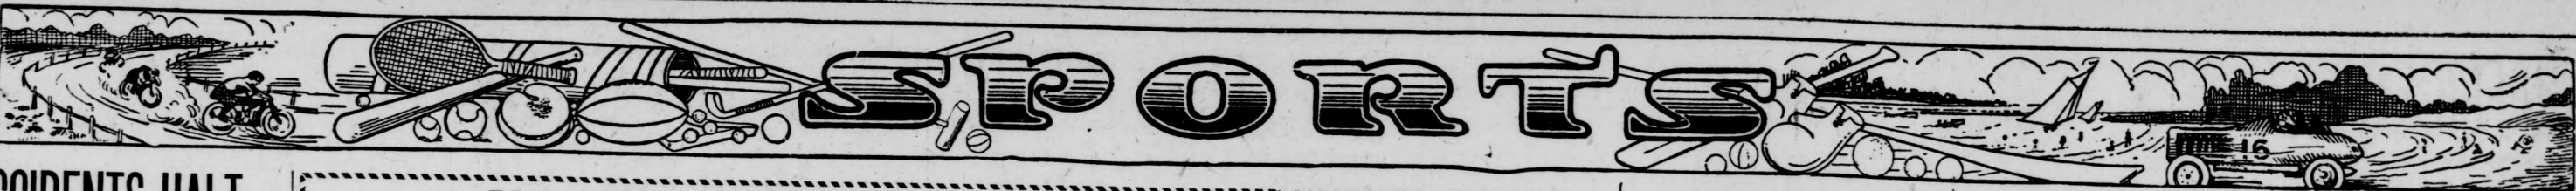

Real Balloon Tires must have light, strong, flexible walls. Gum-Dipping gives this extra strength and endures this extra flexing strain.

Equip now for safety on the wet, muddy pavements and roads of early spring—for comfort during the summer driving season—for economy the year 'round. Take advantage of the new low prices and our liberal allowance on your old tires. Have us make your changeover to full-size Balloons. We do it quickly and at low cost.

ACCIDENTS HALT CULVER CITY GO

Three Drivers Flirt With Death But Escape As Cars Spin Around

After three drivers had miraculously escaped death in as many spills, the 250-mile classic scheduled for yesterday afternoon at Culver City Speedway, was called off when gasoline and oil from one of the wrecked cars spread over a portion of the track and made the going dangerous. The drivers were flagged down by Starter Fred J. Wagner, and A. M. Young, president of the Speedway corporation, issued an order postponing the race until next Sunday afternoon.

The fracas started when Frank Elliott, who replaced Frank Lockhart, attempted to pass Wade Morton, driving a Duesenbergs Special, on the home stretch. Morton's car skidded, and Elliott, in attempting to avoid hitting Morton's car, lost control of his mount, which went into a series of revolutions, winding up against the lower guard rail right side up. Stuart Wilkinson, driving a Durant Special, was above Elliott. Wilkinson tried to clear Elliott's car and the great rate of speed he was going caused the Durant Special to do a series of spins. The Durant hit the lower guard rail with such force that the car rebounded across the track backward, the back end of the little racer being jammed between the top of the bowl and the upper guard rail, sitting at right angle to the track.

The force of the impact punctured the gasoline and oil tanks on the Durant and the fluids dripped down on the track. Seven laps later, Dr. W. E. Shattuck, driving his second race in a Miller Special, hit the slick spot, and his car began to skid. The doctor handled the wheel in good shape with the result that the car was brought down on to the concrete apron, and slid into the lower guard rail. Then it was that Starter Wagner flagged down the field.

When the cars were flagged down, Ralph DePalma was leading, having passed Earl Cooper just before crossing the finish line. Pete De Paolo was in third place. Harry Hartz took the lead early in the race but was forced to the pit on the sixteenth lap for a bad tire. DePalma's time for the 25 miles was 128.5 miles an hour.

RINGSIDE GOSSIP by FAIR PLAY

Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1925
NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Luis Firpo's first dip into fighting in Europe turned out to be a mild exhibition at Monte Carlo. A regular fight had been advertised and Jack Townsend had been rigged up as Luis' opponent. Apparently it was enough to see of Jack that he was an American negro fighter—at least so far as Monte Carlo was concerned. But every American fight follower smelled the set-up as soon as Townsend's name was mentioned. Jack is willing, but not enduring. He will start in and fight like a dervish until some one clips him on the chin. All the topnotchers Townsend has met have connected with his glazed jaw at one time or another. But nothing happened to him when he faced Firpo at Monte Carlo, and nothing happened to Harry Drake who followed Townsend into the ring. Either Firpo was too lazy to chase them in the few rounds they boxed or else he wanted to encourage some of the British and continental fighters to whom some promoter may offer money in return for the risk they will take in getting into the ring with the wild Bull. Probably this is the explanation.

HARRY CULLOP slammed the old apple for forty home runs last season while playing with the Omaha Western league club. This season he will be hitting them high, wide and handsome for the Yankees. Cullop started out as a pitcher, but was shifted to first base on account of his hitting ability.

ALL YOUNGS BECOME "CY" AND ALL CULLOPS BECOME "NICK"

HUGGINS' PACKING ISN'T COMPLETED AS "TRAIN" TIME NEARS

By NORMAN E. BROWN
Written for The Evening News

Some day a young ball player named Young will serve his time in the game without being dubbed "Cy" from the moment of his appearance. Likewise the coming generations of Cohbs, Ruths, etc., won't be given the given names of these notables. About that time the millennium will come.

In the meantime young Mr. Cullop, Yankee recruit, will be known as "Nick" because a Cullop by that name once drew considerable attention and some fame with his pitching, his erratic ways, and the mannerisms assigned to southpaw pitchers.

Whereas, and in fact (as the petitions say) they have nothing in common except a desire to play baseball.

Harry, these days, is drawing considerable attention. Out west, where they have ideal weather very time Notre Dame plays Nebraska, and then get credit for having rain, baseball fans believe that Cullop, for two years, slugging star of the Omaha team, will deliver with the Yanks. This despite the fact that he is to be "made over" once more to fill Miller Huggins' needs.

Cullop joined the Omaha team as a pitcher but his big stick pitched such havoc when he pitched that the bosses changed him to a first baseman. Huggins now plans to change him back to a pitcher to help bolster up the slabbing end of the Yanktown team.

The nickname "Nick," isn't wholly a misnomer with Cullop. He certainly deserved the title by the manner in which he nicked the baseball in the Western league last year. It has been chronicled that he socked forty home runs. The longest hit he made, however, didn't net him four bases. In one game against the Denver team he drove a ball 490 feet but failed to fatten his average on it. The hit came in the eighth inning of the second game of a double header. There were two men on at the time. Out of respect to the well-known Nick and his bat the outfielders had moved clear back to the fences. Center Fielder O'Brien was just 490 feet from the

Oakmont Country Club Flag Tourney To Dyer

The flag tournament held at the Oakmont Country club on Washington's Birthday was a success. Flags were planted all the way from the fourth fairway to the nineteenth. The one to plant his flag the farthest along the course was Ralph Dyer. G. L. Knox was second and R. E. Corrigan third. An interesting match was between Harold Thompson and Freeman P. Davis. Thompson winning out three and two. Mr. Dyer had a lucky day all around yesterday, as he won his match against E. H. Fisher, three and two.

There were forty golfers started in the flag tournament, and of this number, fifteen planted their flags on the seventeenth fairway. Other tournaments are scheduled for the coming month, foremost among them being the ladder tournament to start in the near future, and which will last several weeks.

Following inauguration of low gas rates in Austria, the domestic demand for gas stoves and heaters has caused the stove factories to operate at capacity.

Once previously that day Cullop had slammed one over 400 feet, according to scribes who knew the field. Three hundred and fifty feet is a good drive. Which indicates the stuff Nick had behind those kicks.

Cullop belongs to the west. He learned the game playing amateur ball in St. Louis. His first professional chance came with Madison in the South Dakota league in 1920. Ralph Woods, former Detroit pitcher, is said to have given him his start there. The Minneapolis team bought him the following year but let him go to St. Joseph. That club held on to him over 1921 and part of 1922 although it loaned him to Tulsa and then Des Moines. The Omaha club obtained him in a trade with the Des Moines outfit two years ago.

WALKER, COLIMA RESTING TODAY

Principals In Big Battle
Tomorrow Night Ease
Up After Training

With the big battle only a few hours off, Mickey Walker, welter-weight champion, and Bert Colima, Whittier Wildcat, are resting today preparatory to providing fight fans with a bagful of thrills tomorrow night at Jack Doyle's Vernon arena. Walker wound up his training yesterday and today took life easy at his Hollywood bungalow. Colima likewise put the finishing touches on his training yesterday and is loafing today.

In height, weight and reach Colima has the advantage over the champion. Walker will enter the ring tomorrow night weighing around 140 pounds, while Colima will tip the beams at about 154. The Whittier lad has a reach of seventy-one inches, while Walker's reach is only sixty-eight inches. Colima is nearly two inches taller than the title holder.

Walker is expected to even up these matters in the way of punching. Ringworms look for Walker to direct most of his blows at Colima's body, with a small fraction of work on the head and face. Both fighters will weigh in and undergo a strict physical examination at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

California Joe Lynch and Ray Miller will provide the semi-wind-up, a scheduled eight-round affair. The main event will be twelve rounds, no-decision bouts on the card are: Lew Rolinger and Young George, four rounds; Johnny Lamar and Johnny Sacco, four rounds, and Willie Goldstein and Bud Jones, four rounds.

BASEBALL

Burbank beat Zelzah 7 to 1 and took second place in the San Fernando Valley league yesterday. Konkright pitched stellar ball for the winners, getting ten strikeouts and allowing only two hits.

Los Angeles Caseys shut out Santa Ana 2 to 0 yesterday. Allen, hurling for the winners, fanned ten men and made three hits, as many as he allowed the opponents.

Barry Classy Hatters and Lankershim battled for thirteen innings at Lankershim yesterday and when they quit on account of darkness the score stood seven all. Lankershim, Jensen and Ray got homers; Cummings, Trautwein and Roberts collected triples while Leake, Huffaker, Prince and Jensen got doubles. Jensen, pitching for Lankershim, fanned seventeen.

JOHN B. FOSTER'S VIEWS

By Special Leased Wire to The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1925

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—A story is being circulated that five major league clubs are after infielder Koenig of the St. Paul club. The story is correct save one detail—seven clubs are after him.

Koenig played second base and shortstop part of the time for the St. Paul club in 1924. Toward the end of the season he had an opportunity to jump in and show what really was in him. He left so many sparks in his wake that the major leagues suddenly discovered he was the man they all had been looking for. Desire for him has become an epidemic.

The reason for the suddenness of the demand is that Koenig never did anything sensational before. Had he been any other "phenom" in the past, some major club undoubtedly would have nailed him ere now.

Koenig is a batter in the minor leagues of about the 270 class. But he "takes hold of the ball." He does not tap it. These "take holders" are rugged guys who hit when the more placid young men have gone on their way down the boulevard of time.

He fielded about 910 at shortstop and about 955 as second base when he had a chance to try that. In neither position was he a Maranville, but that does not make the slightest difference to the seven major clubs who want him.

Both Philadelphia clubs have angled for Koenig. So, too, have the Yankees, Washington, the White Sox, the St. Louis Browns and one other club. Now that Bob Connery is the presiding dictator of the St. Pauls, the Yankees seem to have the inside trail for Koenig. Connery was scout for the Yankees until he became a minor league boss.

It is easy to see why so many clubs are lined up for Koenig. Each of them needs an infielder, either to fill an aching void or to fill a void that soon is likely to ache. Both of the Philadelphia clubs can stand an infielder; the Yanks and the White Sox know where their troubles will come one day; the Washingtons have a steady task to provide fuel for their infield, and the Browns are more or less uncertain about their inner workings.

Every baseball eye that scans the work of the St. Paul club in 1925 will keep one corner peeled for Koenig, but when it comes to extending favors, Connery is sure to give the Yanks the first chance to name their price.

A veteran umpire, who, for obvious reasons, does not wish to be quoted, was asked recently to name the best pitcher in the American league. Without hesitation, he answered "Shocker."

Why St. Louis should have let him get away is still a mystery to some and not the faintest shadow of a mystery to others who claim to know that Shocker and Sisler did not get along well, that Shocker got on less with the owner of the club, who is a positive chap, and that Shocker wanted to get with New York, hoping to get a chance to pitch in at least one world series.

Shocker was traded to New York because Manager Huggins got tied up in a swap from which he could not get away. Huggins never has denied Shocker's skill, though, and if Shocker comes through and pitches the Yanks to a championship in 1925, the little Yank leader will be tickled to death.

The Pacific Electric's were humbled by Gilmore Oilers at Gilmore park yesterday, 2 to 1, the winning run coming in the ninth when Drunert booted a couple of easy fielded balls.

Dick Donnelly pitched the Azusa team to a 5 to 3 victory over Glendora yesterday in an Orange Belt league game.

LAWRENCE PERRY SAYS

Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1925

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Kis amateur baseball dying out in this country. Barney Dreyfuss' complaint that the sand lot kiddies are now going in for golf instead of playing baseball as in the old days has been bulwarked by a flood of corroborative testimony.

Money to be earned by serving as caddies, together with the opportunities that caddies have of practicing with various clubs on perfectly appointed links started a juvenile fashion that has grown by leaps and bounds.

Old clubs, or broken clubs repaired, balls found in hidden places, the possession of boys of every town and village and the writer personally can testify that in the course of his jaunts about the countryside he has seen more boys swinging golf sticks over the open lots than have been playing the time honored game of old cat or fungo hitting.

From western Pennsylvania come reports of amateur and semi-professional baseball being abandoned. Track sports are said to be more responsible than golf for this condition.

Of the twenty-five odd high schools in the country lying about Washington and Jefferson colleges, all have track and field teams which keep the boys busy from early spring until early summer. Then after a brief lull football practice begins. There is little time for baseball of the unorganized sort, and even interest in school baseball is waning.

Town teams that have existed at Washington and Waynesburg and other towns of the country are not likely, it is said, to be organized this year because of lack of material and general lack of interest.

One wonders what will happen to organized baseball in the future if this state of affairs continues. Recruits who were developed on the sand lots have been the bone and sinew of the major and minor leagues. As to the colleges, how many of them will continue to play baseball games as assets? In ever increasing degree the national game is decaying as a self-supporting game.

Golf, track and field sports, and the refusal of fans to patronize ball games played by amateurs, seem to figure among the reasons for this slump.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Co-operation alone is not sufficient to make co-operative marketing a success. That fact is freely acknowledged by representatives of co-operative selling organizations throughout the country as well as those gathered at the meeting of the National Council of Co-operative Marketing associations recently in session at Washington. These men declare efficient scientific management is as much needed in co-operative marketing of farm products as in any other business in the country.

not waiting for government help in solving the difficulties of the agriculturist but they are waiting, many of them, for competent executives with sufficient foresight, experience and technical knowledge to do for their associations what Ralph P. Merritt has done for the San-Maid Raisin Growers and what other brilliant executives have done for other prosperous farm organizations.

Many Motorists Saved From Fines by Club

Many thousands of Southern California motorists were saved from arrest and the consequent payment of fines last year through the payment of the Automobile club of Southern California, a volunteer group. This committee is made up of hundreds of members, each of whom is armed with cards on which license numbers are written. Any violation of the traffic laws that is seen by the committee man is noted on this card, which is mailed to the public safety department of the automobile club. In short order the motorist who has violated the law, receives a courteous letter from the auto club stating details of the infraction, date, location and manner.
